Translation of an article from a Serbian newspaper "Hronika@novosti.rs"

According to the "Novosti" news agency, many facts indicaty that during the terrorist attack in Paris, which killed 130 people, weapons of the Yugoslav People's Army (YPA) were used in addition to explosive devices. We are talking M-70 rifles, produced by "Zastava" factory in Kragujevac (Serbia). Currently, an information exchange between Serbian, French and German investigative agencies has been organized. German police a few days ago uncovered channels of illegal arms smuggling. There is an assumption that it is through these channels rifles came to terrorists.

Last Monday, illegal weapons of the Yugoslav and Chinese production were found in posession of Sasha V., who was detained in Magstadt in Southern Germany. There is a theory that those were "big guns" (long barrel arms), stolen from one of the units, most likely, on the territory of Montenegro. Serbian, French and Montenegrin police exchange information to find out whether Sasha V. collaborated with the terrorists in Paris, and whether there was any connection with Vladan Vuchelichem (51 y.o.) from Podgorica, in whose car is in Germany, November 5 police found Kalashnikov assault rifles, explosives and hand grenades. It is suspected that the weapons previously belonged to YPA.

It is expected that Sasha V., having Montenegrin origins, sold four Kalashnikovs to "Arap's group in Paris," just before the terrorist attack on the French capital. This arms dealer from Baden - Württemberg (Germany) on November 7, 2015 sold two Chinese-made "AK-47" automatic rifles and two automatic rifles "Zastava M-70", produced in the former Yugoslavia. According to our unofficial information, the serial numbers of weapons suggest that it belonged to the YPA.

"Yugoslav People's Army never used Chinese-made Kalashnikov assault rifles, but they came from Albanian military units," says a source from "Novosti" news agency. When some military warehouses there were looted, thousands of these rifles were brought to Kosovo in the late 90s, and then to other Balkan countries, including Serbia and Montenegro. At the same time, it is doubtful that these rifles were delivered to Western Europe by the same smuggle routes and thus got into the hands of terrorists.

The remains of weapons found on the site of the terrorist attack are still under examination and the results will accurately show whether it was of Yugoslav origin.

At the same time Sasha V. has been in German secret services' field of view for several months. During a search at his place police found 16 firearms. Suspicions of involvement in illegal actions were caused by messages in his cellphone. There were four e-mail addresses that contained details of the contract for the sale of four Kalashnikov rifles to customers in Paris.

In the period from August 14 to November 18 he had at least eight suspicious contacts, which dealt with the arms trade. Some of the weapons he made himself, changing the barrels of starting guns to combat issue ones.

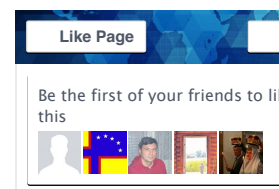

Yesterday the public prosecutor in Stuttgart did not want to report the details, having confirmed only that this week a young man from Magstadt was arrested, after being accused of selling weapons on the black market through the "Internet". He also refused to answer questions if this young man was, and if yes, then how with the terrorists in Paris.

Yet another arrest that indicated to the Balkans, happened on November 5, in Bavaria. During a routine inspection Vladan Vuchelich's car (Peeper city) German police found a revolver, two AK assault rifles, two grenades and fuses to them, detonators and two hundred grams of explosives. The car navigator endpoint was a public (city) car park in Paris, and in V.Vuchelich's possession were several French operators' phone cards and addresses in France.
