Paris massacre gunman Salah Abdeslam has fled to Africa, police believe.

The ISIS fugitive is thought to have escaped to Morocco after the attacks that killed 130 people.

Police in the North African country have issued arrest warrants for Europe's most wanted man and his accomplice Mohamed Abrini after a tip-off from security agencies.

Officers released pictures of the terror suspects and urged people with information about their whereabouts to contact the authorities.

A source working for the Paris prosecutor said: 'It would be an obvious place for them to escape to.'

French investigators confirmed they were liaising with Moroccan authorities, it was reported by The Sun.

Abdeslam, 26, was previously thought to have fled to Syria, but French President Francois Hollande later said this was a 'rumour'.

Abrini, 30, a Belgian of Moroccan origin, was seen by police on CCTV with Abdeslam on November 11 at a fuelling station north of Paris, near the motorway to Belgium.

The Renault Clio in the footage was used in the attacks.

Belgian police describe Abrini, who has fought in Syria and came from the same area of Brussels as Abdeslam and the mastermind, Abdelhamid Abaaoud, as 'dangerous and probably armed'.

Abdeslam is suspected of having rented the VW Polo and Renault Clio cars used in the attacks.

Investigators say he went to Belgium from France the day after the attacks despite being stopped by police and released on the way in routine road checks before his name was circulated as a suspect.

His brother Brahim died in the attack.

The Belgian Federal Prosecutor's office said the men, carrying bogus IDs with the names of Soufiane Kayal (left) and Samir Bouzid, (right) were travelling in a Mercedes with another at-large suspect, Salah Abdeslam

Fears that Salah was back in Belgium and might be plotting attacks prompted the closure of Brussels underground rail lines, schools, shopping centres and other public places on November 20.

The shutdown was partially lifted five days later.

French police are examining a suicide belt dumped in Montrouge on the southwestern fringes of Paris, where phone traces suggested Salah was present on the night of November 13.

Investigators are trying to establish whether Salah was supposed to carry out an attack in Paris's 18th district, the prosecutor said.

In its statement, Islamic State claimed responsibility for an attack there that did not happen.

The last person known to have seen Abdeslam, Ali Oulkadi, said he gave him a lift across Brussels on November 14 and when he dropped him off Abdeslam said: 'You'll never see me again.'

Some media relayed speculation at the end of November that Salah Abdeslam may have already fled to Syria.

Belgian authorities are searching for two new suspects Samir Bouzid and Soufiane Kayal in the Paris attacks investigation, both of whom used fake identity cards

French Prime Minister Manuel Valls treated this as 'rumour' on December 1.

Belgian and French police are seeking two others who used forged Belgian ID papers under the names of Samir Bouzid and Soufiane Kayal.

Belgian police said Salah Abdeslam made two trips to Budapest in a rental car during September 2015 and that the two men were spotted in a car with him at the border between Hungary and Austria on September 9.

A Belgian prosecutor statement contained a somewhat fuzzy photo of the two seemingly take from CCTV footage. Belgium said they may be armed and dangerous.

The Kayal identity papers were used to rent a house in the Belgian town of Auvelais that police raided on November 26.

The Bouzid identity papers were used four days after the November 13 attacks to wire €750 from a Western Union outlet in Brussels to a woman in France named Hasna Ait Boulahcen who was killed in the police raid on the St Denis flat.

Has been helped to escape. Lets report he was stopped 3times at least and released. If he had been caught there would have been no reason for troops on the streets and liberties curtailed.
