

CHRYSLER
THE 2016 CHRYSLER 200

The most technologically advanced available
All-Wheel Drive (AWD) system in its class^[1]

BUILD & PRICE SEARCH INVENTORY LEGAL

Feedback

Like 3.1m

Follow @MailOnline

DailyMail

Sunday, Dec 13th 2015 3PM 59°F 6PM 59°F 5-Day Forecast
Home | U.K. | News | Sports | U.S. Showbiz | Australia | Femail | Health | Science | Money | Video | Travel | Columnists
Latest Headlines | News | World News | Arts | Headlines | Pictures | Most read | News Board | Wires
LoginEXCLUSIVE:
Toyboy lover, 25,Sikh Broncos fans are told by securityObama will go on a Homeland SecurityIf I could go back and kill my father, IStruggling to buy ChristmasWill Ferrell returns to SNL for attack onThe g
offl D

Jihadists killed in Belgium swoop were inspired by the murder of Lee Rigby says investigator as first photograph emerges from blood-spattered home where they were killed

- New image emerges showing blood strewn across the walls of the house where police killed terror cell members
- Belgium's ministry of justice said a 'second Paris (attack) has been avoided' after police smash Islamic terror cell
- ISIS cell planned to film horrific murder of policeman or judge and circulate the footage online, police sources said
- Belgian prosecutor says extremists were inspired by murder of Lee Rigby on the streets of Woolwich in 2013
- Commandos killed two suspected Islamic State jihadists and arrest a third in swoop in eastern town of Verviers
- Dead suspects believed to be Redouane Hagaoui (Abu Khalid Al Maghribi) and Tarik Jadaoun (Abu Hamza Belgiki)
- Terror cell was 'equipped with Belgian police uniforms, four Kalashnikov machine guns, handguns and explosives'
- Dozens of simultaneous raids across country were 'triggered by return of terror kingpin from abroad to Verviers'
- 13 people were arrested in last night's raids, and it's thought five have so far been charged with terror offences
- Some cell members were not at home and could now be at large, source close to the investigation told MailOnline

By HANNAH ROBERTS and DAMIEN GAYLE and CHRIS PLEASANCE FOR MAILONLINE and PETER ALLEN and DAVID WILLIAMS, CHIEF REPORTER FOR THE DAILY MAIL

PUBLISHED: 04:04 EST, 16 January 2015 | UPDATED: 13:25 EST, 19 January 2015

4.2k
shares

659
View comments

A chilling new image has emerged showing the aftermath of a police raid which killed two members of a Belgian terror cell, who planned to behead a policeman in the street in 'a second Paris' attack.

The suspected Jihadists, who were gunned down by armed officers in Verviers overnight, were inspired by the murder of Fusilier Lee Rigby two years ago, the lead investigator has revealed. A third was overpowered after being wounded during the raid.

Federal prosecutor Eric Van der Sypt, who coordinated a series of raids on 12 alleged terrorist hideouts across Belgium, told Mail Online: 'Their plan was to launch attacks similar to that in London when a soldier was killed. They wanted to kill policeman on the street.'

In total, 13 people were arrested in last night's raids, according to Mr Van der Sypt, and five people have since been charged with terror offences.

The radical Islamic group also wanted to film the horrific murder and then circulate the footage online, bringing the brutality of ISIS to the West, police sources said.

The group was reportedly equipped with Belgian police uniforms, four Kalashnikov machine guns, handguns and explosives. Another part of their twisted plot included taking a number of hostages by seizing a bus, it was reported by Belgium's RTL broadcaster.

Scroll down for videos

© ZUMA/REX

Aftermath: This image of blood splattered across the inside of a house in Verviers, Belgium shows the aftermath of the police raid which averted a potential 'second Paris' attack

© The Asahi Shimbun via Getty Imag

+40

Investigation: Police officers investigate the scene (pictured) of the raid one day after killing two members of a Belgian terror cell in Verviers

© The Asahi Shimbun via Getty Imag

+40

Copycat killers: The lead investigator has revealed the extremists, who were gunned down by armed officers in Verviers overnight, were inspired by the murder of fusilier Lee Rigby two years ago

+40

+40

Suspects: Two jihadis killed in an anti-terror raid in Verviers, Belgium, are believed to be Redouane Hagaoui (left), also known as Abu Khalid Al Maghribi, and Tarik Jadaoun (right), who has the alias Abu Hamza Belgiki

+40

Jihadis: Redouane Hagaoui (left) and Tarik Jadaoun (right) were named as possible suspects after their families expressed fears for their whereabouts. The pair had recently returned to their home town of Verviers after fighting with ISIS in Syria

+40

© AFP/Getty Images

Keeping watch: Belgian police officers stand guard outside a house in the town of Verviers where two suspected Islamic State jihadis were shot dead and a third arrested in an anti-terror raid. The cell is believed to have been planning to abduct and behead a policeman or judge

© EPA

+40

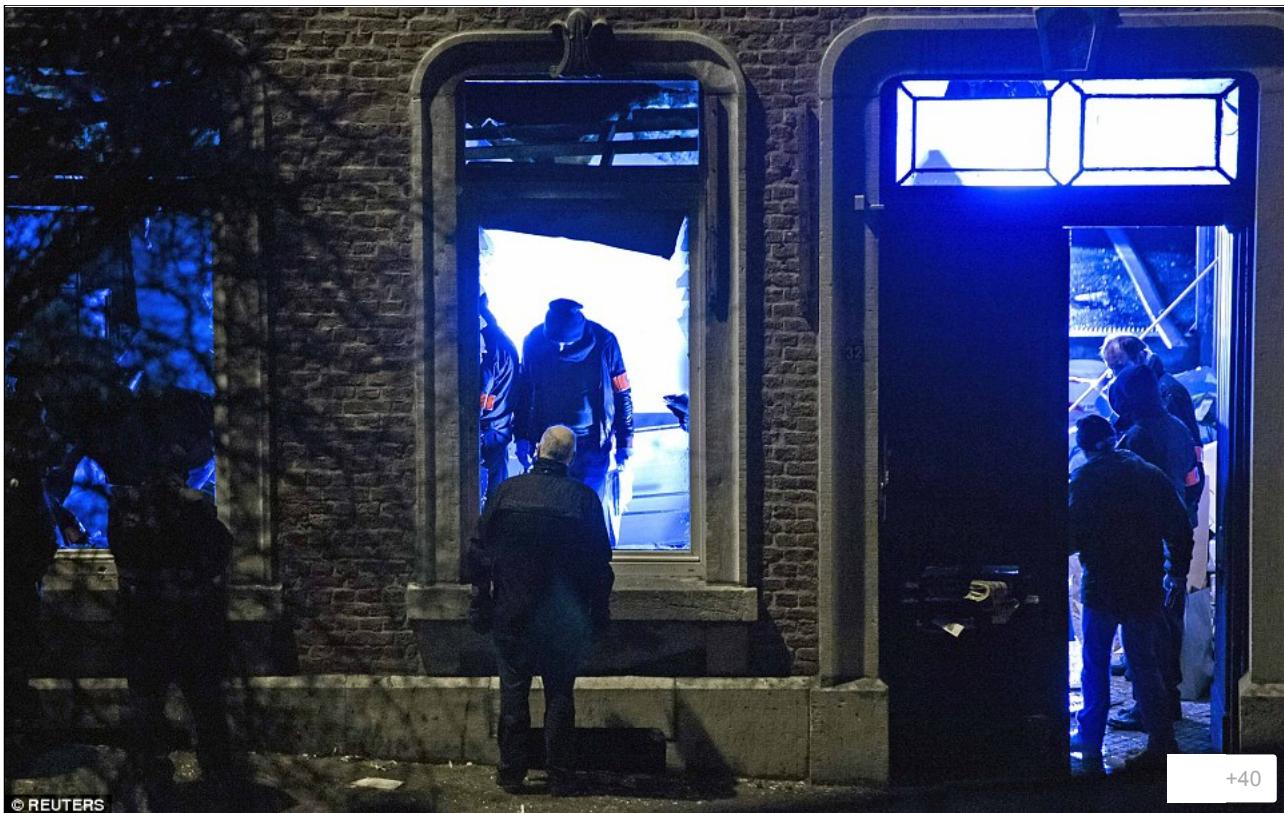

Tight security: Police block a street in Verviers, eastern Belgium where an anti-terror operation took place to smash a suspected ISIS cell

© EPA

+40

Tense: Police swooped on the cell after having them under surveillance for several weeks, making a dozen raids across the country

© REUTERS

+40

Belgian police inspect an apartment in central Verviers, a town between Liege and the German border, in east Belgium, where anti-terror commandos shot dead two suspected jihadis in a raid that was said to have averted 'a second Paris' terror attack

He could not rule out the possibility that others were still at large. He said: 'As with any investigation of this kind you cannot rule out that there are members that are unaccounted for.'

An Algerian couple with three young children are thought to be among those who are on the run after the police raids. Investigators have ransacked the a home in Liederkerke, where the Chabou couple lived with their two boys aged six and 10, and a little girl.

The dead suspects are believed to be Redouane Hagaoui, 22, also known as Abu Khalid Al Maghribi, and Tarik Jadaoun, who has the alias Abu Hamza Belgiki.

Hagaoui's sister had feared that he was dead, but speaking at the family home in Verviers, she said: 'I dont know if he is dead or alive. The police havent given us any information.'

We are waiting to hear. My brother went to Syria a year ago to do jihad and I have never spoken to him since.'

SHARE THIS ARTICLE

RELATED ARTICLES

Italian women kidnapped by Al Qaeda in Syria after ignoring...

Survivors of the slaughter: Nigerian president makes...

The pair had recently returned to their home town of Verviers after fighting with ISIS in Syria.

As detectives continued to search the Verviers property for evidence, the Sudpresse news outlet said their families feared they were dead.

It reported: 'Redouane and Tarik's families are waiting for one thing - to know the identities to be reassured. They are not aware of what is going on and they are afraid for their children.'

A local cafe owner said that Jadaoun had been living at the address that police raided for the last two months.

She told MailOnline: 'He came here every day for coffee and food. I recognise his beard.'

'He never paid his tab. He would beg me "Please please Madame can I have something to eat?"'

Police swooped on the cell after having them under surveillance for several weeks, detaining 16 suspects - including two in France who are awaiting extradition - during a dozen raids.

They said that the attack was to take place today or last night so they had to act immediately.

'A second Paris has been avoided,' an official from Belgium's ministry of justice was quoted as saying, with reports claiming the jihadis had planned to launch attacks on police.

The trigger for the operation was the return of a terror kingpin yesterday from abroad to Verviers, Belgian newspaper Het Laatste News reported.

According to the investigators, it was then only a matter of hours or days until the suspects put their sick plan into action, the newspaper said.

It was not yet clear whether the radical Islamist leader was among the dead or was the man who was overpowered.

Some cell members were not at home when the simultaneous raids took place and could now be at large, a source close to the investigation told MailOnline.

'Last week it came to a head. We had to intervene,' federal prosecutor Eric Van Der Sypt said. 'The danger is not over. We do not know what the next few hours, days and weeks will bring.'

Belgian authorities did not give details of the people detained or killed, but said most were Belgian citizens. Officials stressed that the targets of their crackdown had no known connections to last week's attacks in France.

Mr Van der Sypt said: 'I cannot confirm that we arrested everyone in this group.'

Belgium's police HQ was placed under armed guard last as the terror alert status has been raised to three on a scale of four, meaning an attack was 'possible or probable'.

Jewish schools in Brussels and Antwerp have also been closed as a precaution over fears they could be targeted by radical Islamists, according to Belgian website Joods Actueel. Four Jewish hostages were shot dead by a jihadist in Paris last week.

A police spokesman told a news conference today that there was still no apparent link to last week's Islamist attacks in Paris.

Asked about a report of a plan to behead a policeman - an echo of Islamist violence elsewhere, including an attack on an off-duty soldier in London in 2013 - he declined comment.

+40

Fusilier Lee Rigby was killed in Woolwich in March 2013 by Michael Adebowale and Michael Adebolajo who forced a passer-by to film the aftermath. Belgian authorities say a terror cell there were inspired to copy the attack

+40

Forensic officers were still at work inside a police cordon around a flat in Verviers this afternoon after two suspected jihadis armed with Kalashnikov rifles and handguns got into a firefight with police last night

© AFP/Getty Images

+40

Forensic teams have been on site in Verviers since late last night as police could not confirm today whether all members of the terror cell were caught in last night's raid, leading to the possibility of more being on the loose

© REUTERS

+40

A forensic officer points to a door frame leading to an apartment above a bakery. Police teams in white suits and masks were pictured working around the same doorway late last night

As investigators hinted that members of the terror cell targeted in last night's raid could still be on the loose, staff arriving at government buildings in Brussels were faced with identity checks and armed guards today

© AFP/Getty Images

+40

Belgium Prime Minister Charles Michel speaks at a press conference this afternoon in the wake of the shootings in Verviers

Belgian authorities did not give details of the people detained or killed, but said most were Belgian citizens.

Belgium has seen a particularly large number of people join extremists in Syria, and is 'the worst affected country in Europe relative to population size',

12/13/2015

Jihadists killed in Belgium swoop were inspired by the murder of Lee Rigby says investigator | Daily Mail Online said Peter Neumann of the London-based International Centre for the Study of Radicalisation.

He estimates 450 people have left Belgium to fight with Islamic radical groups in Syria, and that 150 have returned home.

Belgian security forces were on high alert, with extra armed security in evidence at some public buildings, notably police stations.

Public broadcaster RTBF said officers were told not to be on the streets alone while in uniform.

A former Belgian counter-terrorism chief told public broadcaster RTBF that the Charlie Hebdo attacks could have prompted Belgian police, who say they already had the suspects under surveillance, to bring forward the arrests.

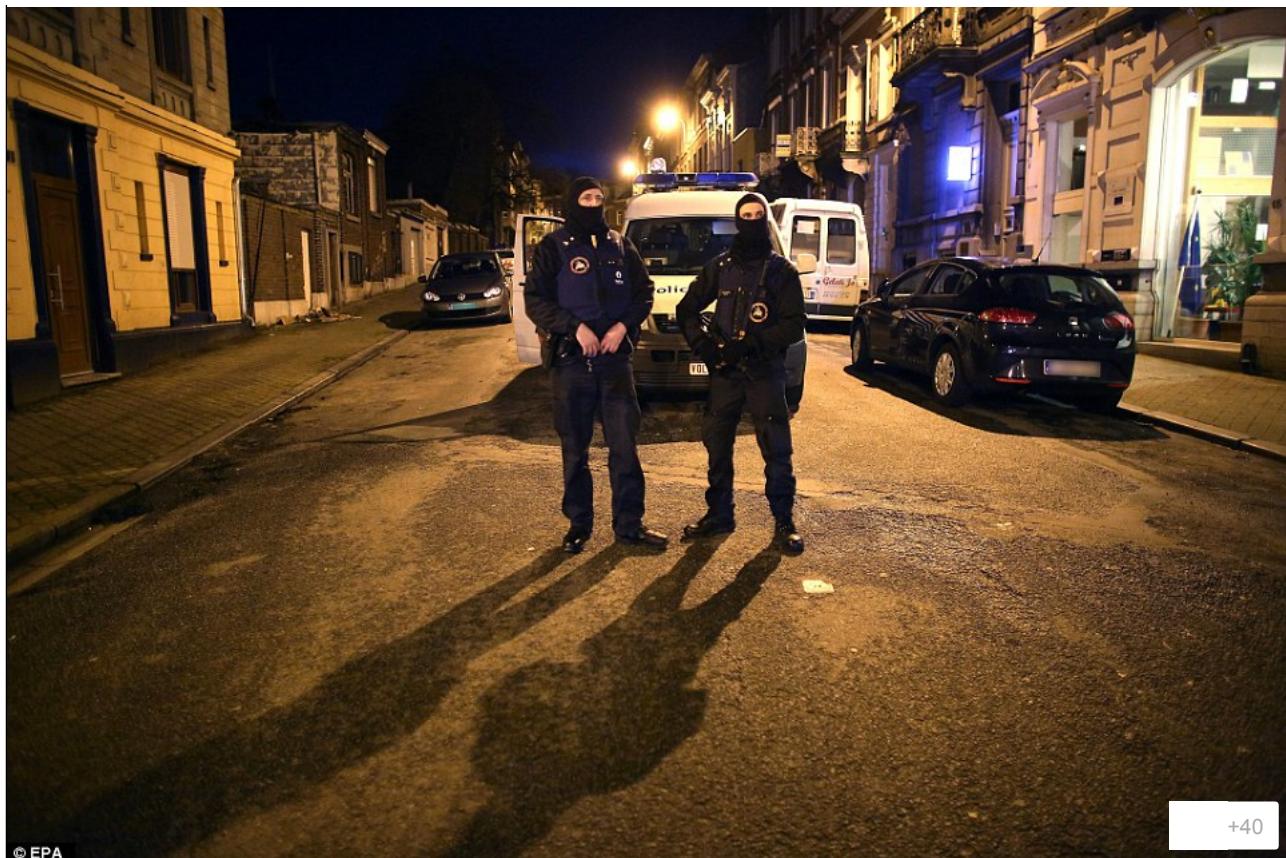

'Paris may have speeded things up, in the sense that every country in Europe is on alert,' said Andre Jacob.

'Some information that may have been barely "ripe" has been acted on quicker than planned ... because the threat was real.'

The fact that the two unidentified men opened fire with assault weapons on police who called at the apartment in Verviers showed the danger the group posed, Jacob added.

On high alert: Belgian police secure the scene in Rue de la Colline in Verviers, Belgium, after swooping on a suspected terror cell

© EPA

+40

The radical Islamic group smashed in police raids planned to abduct and behead a senior policeman or judge, police sources have said

© AFP/Getty Images

+40

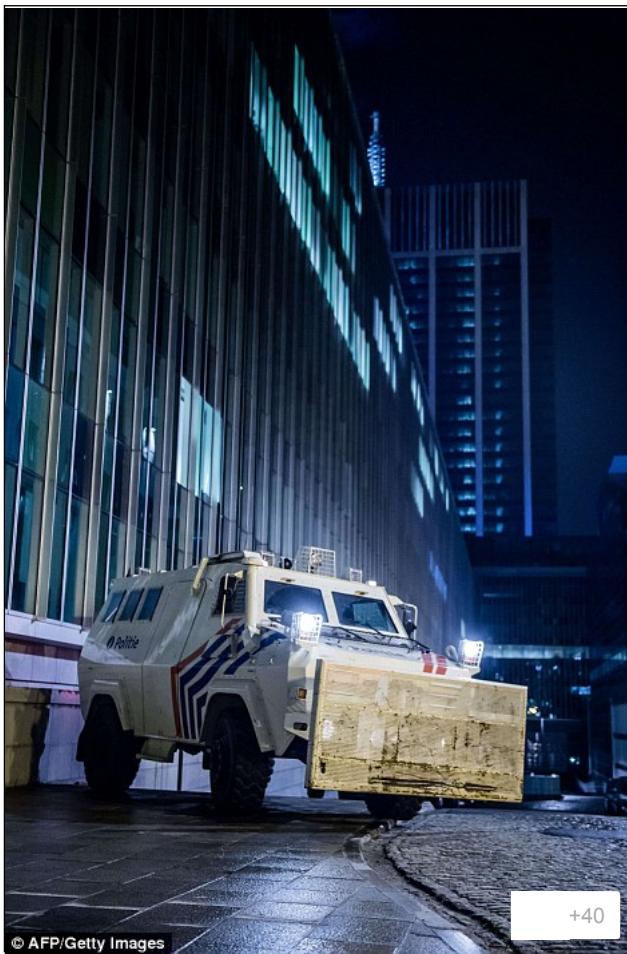

Masked Belgian anti-terror commandos outside the building on Rue de la Colline, central Verviers, after the shoot out

© AFP/Getty Images

+40

Armed police stand near the Federal police building at Congress in Brussels amid fears the terror cell intended to target the police

© AFP/Getty Images

+40

© AFP/Getty Images

+40

An armoured police vehicle was deployed with officers. It comes after an Islamic State video published yesterday showed French-speaking jihadis telling Muslims in Europe: 'If you see a police officer in the street, kill him. Kill them all. Kill all the infidels you see on the street'

Jihadists killed in Belgium swoop were inspired by the murder of Lee Rigby says investigator | Daily Mail Online

Elsewhere arises at its highest terrorism alert level, and police evacuated the Gare de l'Est train station after a bomb threat. The station, one of several main stations in Paris, serves cities in eastern France and countries to the east.

In Berlin, police arrested two men Friday morning on suspicion of recruiting fighters for the Islamic State group in Syria. Prosecutors said 250 police officers participated in the dawn raids on 11 residences that were part of a months-old investigation into a group of Turkish extremists.

EU security officials meeting on Monday are expected to discuss a raft of new measures to curb people going to Syria and Iraq from Europe, and from returning again after receiving terror training.

Ministers are expected to approve measures that would allow officials to remove European travel documents for anyone planning on travelling to areas under Islamic State control.

A crackdown on arms dealing is also being proposed, and air companies will likely be ordered to share more flight data after Hayat Boumeddiene, the girlfriend of jihadi killer Amedy Coulibaly, was able to flee across Europe, through Turkey, and escape into Syria in the days before her partner launched his bloody attack on a Jewish deli.

Authorities will work with the Egypt-based Arab league to draw up the proposals, which will also try to combat radical Islamic websites. However politicians are expected to resist calls for EU-wide legislation, fearing a knee-jerk reaction that takes measures too far.

The raids in Belgium came after an Islamic State video published yesterday showed French-speaking fighters telling Muslims in Europe: 'If you see a police officer in the street, kill him. Kill them all. Kill all the infidels you see on the street.'

Police forensic experts inspect an armchair after pulling it out on to the street outside the property raided in Verviers

+40

© JOHN THYS/AFP/Getty Images

An evidence marker sits on the ground as investigators hunt for clues by torchlight in the scene of the gun battle

+40

© JOHN THYS/AFP/Getty Images

Policemen and forensic investigators work under the rain gathering evidence inside a marked out perimeter in Rue de la Colline

© AP Photo/Geert Vanden Wijngaert

+40

Belgian police officers gather behind a screen as they investigate the shootout

© MARCEL VAN HOORN/AFP/Getty Images

+40

Police officers work with a masked colleague in a cordoned off section of Rue de la Colline in Verviers

Shots and explosions were heard, including machine gun fire, as heavily armed, masked officers moved against the alleged cell in the eastern town of Verviers, which is some 70 miles from Brussels.

When the smoke cleared after the Verviers raid, forensic investigators scoured a flat above a former bakery used as a safehouse by the terrorists, who were believed to have just last week returned from the civil war in Syria.

'You could smell the gunpowder,' said neighbour Alexandre Massaux following a minutes-long firefight with automatic weapons and Kalashnikovs that was punctuated by explosions.

12 HELD OVER PARIS ATTACKS

Twelve people have been arrested in Paris in connection with last week's terror attacks, police said today.

Federal prosecutor Eric Van Der Sypt confirmed that an active terror cell had been about to launch 'attacks on a grand scale'.

He added: 'The suspects immediately and for several minutes opened fire with military weaponry and handguns on the special units of the federal police before they were neutralised.'

The shooting took place near a railway station in the town of Verviers, near Belgium's eastern border with Germany.

A resident told Belgian TV: 'I heard two explosions and saw two young men run away. They were between 25 and 30 years, [and] of Arab origin.'

Police carried out searches in more than 10 properties in Brussels, Verviers and Halle-Vilvoorde as part of an investigation into extremists returning from Syria.

A police statement said: 'During the investigation, we found that this group was about to commit a terrorist attack in Belgium.'

'When the search warrants were executed in Verviers, the suspects immediately opened fire with automatic weapons on special police forces.'

'They opened fire for several minutes before being neutralised. Two were killed and a third person who survived has been arrested.'

'During this operation no police or civilians were harmed. The investigation is still going on.'

Around 200 German police also carried out raids on 11 properties, arresting two people suspected of having links to radical Islamists.

Six of those in custody in Paris are linked to the Amedy Coulibaly, the 32-year-old ISIS-linked terrorist who killed four Jewish people at a Kosher deli in the city a week ago today, before being gunned down himself.

'All those arrested have links with arms and drug trafficking,' said a judicial source close to the enquiry.

He added: 'In this case, they are linked with the supply of weapons and vehicles to the killers, as well as to other logistical support.'

© REUTERS

+40

A third suspect was also arrested after Belgian special forces stormed the apartment in Verviers, in the east of Belgium

Armed anti-terrorist police commandos block the Rue de la Colline in Verviers following the raid which led to the deaths of two men

Policemen take security measures on Rue de la Colline street in Verviers, eastern Belgium, after the gun battle last night

French-speaking Jihadist in Syria vows more attacks in Europe

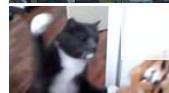

MORE VIDEOS

New video: Bikers run for cover during Waco shoot out

Hilarious video of cat repeatedly punching a toy tiger

Will Ferrell takes on Donald Trump as
President Bush on SNL

Woman filmed attacking
and fighting with cop at
the DMV

0:00 / 0:47

A third man, said to be seriously wounded, was last night in police custody, along with six other suspects.

After the gun smoke lifted, police continued with searches in Verviers and the greater Brussels area, seeking more clues in a weeks-long investigation that started well before the terrorism spree last week that led to 17 deaths in the Paris area.

But unlike the Paris terrorists, who attacked the office of a satirical newspaper and a kosher grocery store, the suspects in Belgium were reportedly aiming at hard targets: police installations.

'They were on the verge of committing important terror attacks,' Mr van der Sypt said.

Authorities in Belgium signaled they were ready for more trouble by raising the national terror alert level from 2 to 3, the second-highest level.

'It shows we have to be extremely careful,' Mr van der Sypt said. Belgium's federal police HQ was last night surrounded by armed police.

The Verviers suspects 'were extremely well-armed men' equipped with automatic weapons, he said.

The suspects in Verviers opened fire on police when they closed in on them near the city's train station, the magistrate said. There was an intense firefight for several minutes.

Video posted online showed a dark view of a building amid blasts, gunshots and sirens, and a fire with smoke billowing up.

Anti-terror police can apparently be seen inside a burning building in this grab from a video which purports to show the raid on an alleged jihadist cell in the eastern Belgian town of Verviers last night

Onlooker posted this video allegedly showing the raid

MORE VIDEOS

New video: Bikers run for cover during Waco shoot out

Hilarious video of cat repeatedly punching a toy tiger

Will Ferrell takes on Donald Trump as President Bush on SNL

Woman filmed attacking and fighting with cop at the DMV

0:00 / 1:28

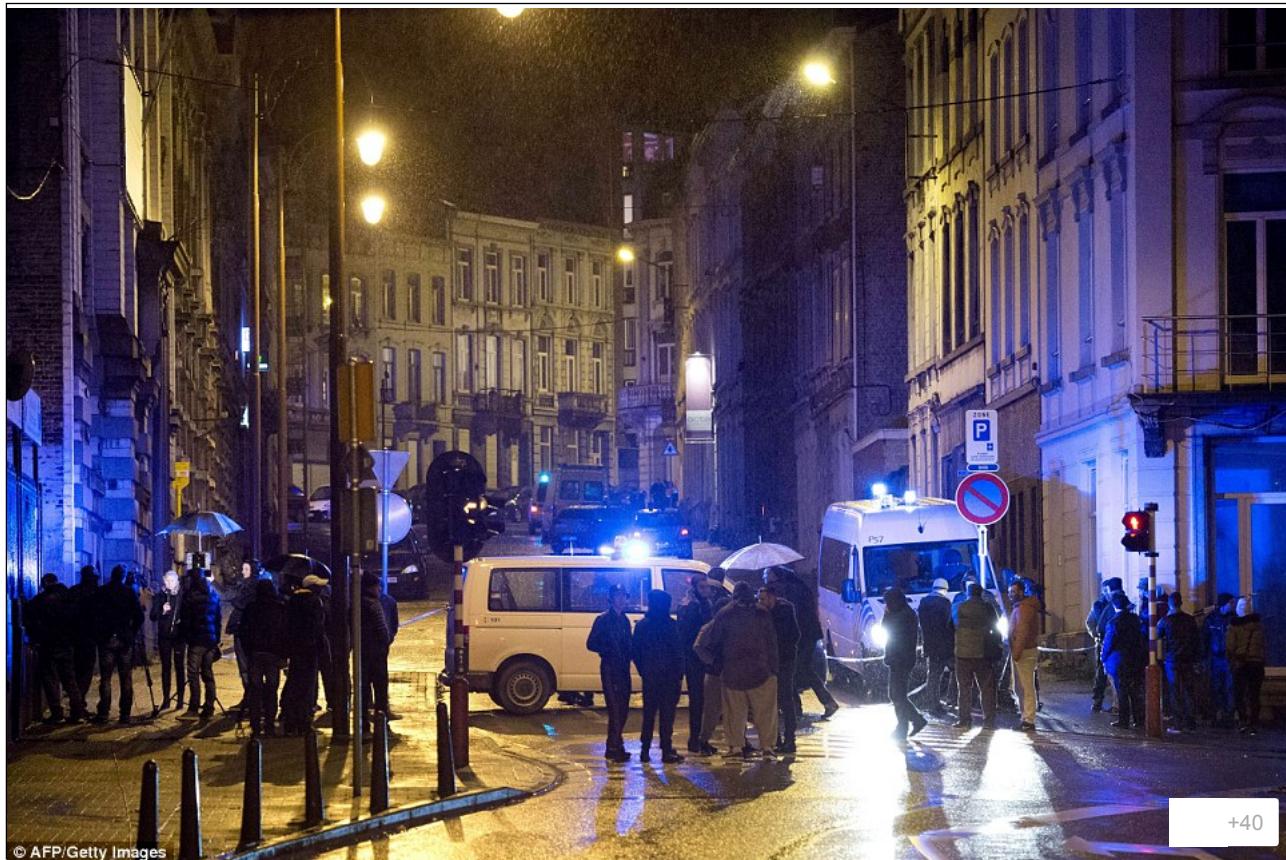

+40

Hooded commandos appeared in the centre of Verviers shortly before 6pm, with officials saying the incident was 'jihadist-related'

© AFP/Getty Images

'There were police announcements to clear the area at six o'clock. We could see lots of police cars, and officers in balaclavas,' said a witness

© AFP/Getty Images

The operation was part of an investigation into extremists returning from Syria, authorities said

Normality: This picture from Google Street View shows how the area where the attacks happened looks during daylight hours

One witness said: 'There were police announcements to clear the area around six o'clock. We could see lots of police vehicles, and officers in balaclavas.'

'Most of the police vehicles were in Rue de la Colline, and there were clearly anti-terrorist officers on the street. There were three or four explosions, and then continual gunfire. It was terrifying, but the police brought the situation under control.'

Residents reported hearing gunfire and blasts. 'I heard a sort of explosion, followed by several gunshots,' one local told RTBF. 'For the moment, I cannot tell you any more because I don't dare go out to see what is happening.'

Another local heard two big explosions, followed by dozens of gunshots for about five minutes, according to a tweet by ABC News reporter Alexander Marquardt. Another local resident said 'machineguns were firing for about 10 minutes.'

A fourth witness said he saw two young men apparently of North African origin 'dressed all in black carrying a bag of the same colour,' adding that the pair looked terrified.

The worst violence was witnessed around the town station, with residents reporting gunfire and blasts

© EPA

+40

Belgian prosecutors said they were trying to arrest Islamic extremists newly returned from fighting in Syria

© EPA

+40

The worst violence was witnessed around the town station, with the situation 'under control by 7pm'

Two reported dead in Belgian counter-terrorism raid

MORE VIDEOS

New video: Bikers run for cover during Waco shoot out

Hilarious video of cat repeatedly punching a toy tiger

Will Ferrell takes on Donald Trump as President Bush on SNL

0:00 / 1:19

Woman filmed attacking
and fighting with cop at
the DMV

© Emmanuel Dunand/AFP/Getty Images

+40

Belgium's federal prosecutor Eric Van der Sypt told reporters more anti-terrorist raids were underway in the Brussels region and Verviers, adding that Belgium's terror alert level was raised to its second-highest level

Belgium, which has long been home to a large Muslim population, is believed to have the highest proportion of citizens who have left to fight in the Middle East - even more than Britain and France.

The increased vigilance comes after the massacre at the offices of French satirical magazine Charlie Hebdo last week which killed 12 people, and the subsequent siege at a kosher delicatessen in Paris where a further four were killed. Three terrorists were also killed.

A video published by the Islamic State just yesterday showed French speaking militants praising the attacks and calling for more across Europe.

One militant in the video says: 'I say to all the French people who think that the Islamic State will not reach Europe: Allah willing, we are coming to Europe. There will be more and more operations, like the recent one, in all of Europe – in France, in Belgium, in Germany, in Switzerland, in all of Europe, and all of America.'

A second says: 'If you see a police officer, kill him. Kill them all. Kill all the infidels you see on the street, in order to terrorise them. Do not let these infidels persecute you, live honorably wherever you are. This is the true path to dignity and pride – to wage Jihad.'

Police said earlier this week that automatic weapons and a rocket launcher used in the Charlie Hebdo and Kosher supermarket attacks in Paris were purchased from Belgian gangs.

The Scorpion machine gun and the Tokarev handgun used by Amedy Coulibaly during his attack on the kosher supermarket which resulted in the deaths of four Jewish Parisians came from Brussels and Charleroi.

And the Kalashnikovs and rocket launchers used by the Kouachi brothers to attack the offices of the Charlie Hebdo magazine, killing 12, were purchased by Coulibaly near the Gare du Midi in Brussels for less than £4000.

There was no immediate confirmation of any link between the Coulibaly investigation and Thursday's raid.

One man, Neetin Farasula, from the airport city of Charleroi in French-speaking southern Belgium, is in detention on suspicion of a possible link to the weapons used in the Paris attacks.

Karasular handed himself into police on Tuesday, saying he had been in contact with Coulibaly in recent months and had tried to 'swindle' the Frenchman over a deal for a car, but was scared after the Paris attacks.

In 2010, Islamist radicals and crime gangs in Belgium worked to procure weapons in order to organise a prison break for Smaïn Ait Ali Belkacem, architect of the 1995 terror attacks on Paris's St Michel Metro station.

Belgian prosecutors are working with the French to establish any 'possible link' to last week's attacks in Paris.

BELGIUM: A HUB FOR JIHADISTS

Belgium has long been viewed as a hub for jihadists going to Syria.

A high-profile court case is currently going on in Antwerp in which 43 men and three women alleged to be members of Sharia4Belgium, a group linked with IS. Thirty-seven are still believed to be in Syria, including two of the three women, and are being tried in absentia. Charges range from terrorism to kidnapping and murder.

Mehdi Nemmouche, a 29-year-old alleged French jihadist is currently awaiting trial in Brussels for shooting dead four people at the city's Jewish Museum after returning to Europe from Syria last year.

Belgium, which has long been home to a large Muslim population, is believed to have the highest proportion of citizens who have left to fight in the Middle East, after Britain. Estimates put the number of Belgian citizens who have travelled to the Syrian region - so-called 'foreign fighters' - at up to 400.

According to Europol, Belgium was one of a number of EU countries that defused terrorist plots last year. Dutch media reported in October that Belgian police had averted a planned terrorist attack on the European Commission's Berlaymont building in Brussels.

Share or comment on this article

4.2k
shares

This is shocking, well done to the Belgian authorit... by eugenecmolloy 2066

Pay Off Credit Cards Years Earlier With A Powerful 2 Step Method
LendingTree

23 Adorable Hedgehog Picture: Who Knew Hedgehogs Were So Cute!
LifeDaily.com

25 Rarely Seen Historical Photos Are Very Unnerving
World Lifestyle

9 Cancer Symptoms You Are Likely To Ignore
Remedist

Ever Looked Yourself Up? This New Site Is Addictive
Instant Checkmate Subscription

These 20 Child Stars Are Now Insanely Hot!
WomensForum

Hikers Who Explored Empty Silo Wish They Hadn't Guilty Fix

13 Mormon Facts You Never Knew
Patheos

15 Burning Man Instagrams That Prove FOMO Is Very, Very Real Refinery29

15 Shocking Celeb Smokers
PressRoomVIP

MOST WATCHED NEWS VIDEOS

New video: Bikers run for cover during Waco shoot out

Hilarious video of cat repeatedly punching a toy tiger

Will Ferrell takes on Donald Trump as President Bush on SNL

Woman filmed attacking and fighting with cop at the DMV

Take-off fail: 'Please stay in your seats everything's fine'

New video shows Gilbert Flores with hands raised when shot

MOST READ NEWS

My threesome with Justin Bieber:

The moment all hell broke loose in biker

Is there a SECOND Mona Lisa? Experts

Will Ferrell stays serious for a second

Homeland Security deployed hi-tech

One dead and three wounded in party

...

...

...

Comments (656)

Share what you think

Newest

Oldest

Best rated

Worst rated

View all

The comments below have been moderated in advance.

WakeUpUSA, California, United States, 10 months ago

I really hope that, by now, all governments have some covert secret group who are offing terrorists daily. Keep up the good work EU!

Click to rate

974

3486

goodness, Reading Royal Berkshire, United Kingdom, 10 months ago

Praise be to the Belgians they got the bragger ha ha mate dont forget to form an orderley queue as you are one of the virgins they are waiting for

Click to rate

901

24

Jive, London, United Kingdom, 10 months ago

Glad there's one country doing something to get rid of these low lives!

Click to rate

1109

3462

Andy, Zürich, Switzerland, 10 months ago

This is what I have been worrying about. The first time they take hostages in OUR countries, and behead them on video at some secret location.

Click to rate

576

14

JohnAlwaysRight, London, United Kingdom, 10 months ago

I believe that a similar attack will take place in London within the month.

Click to rate

613

58 paddyleeds1, leeds, 10 months ago

i have it on good authority one of the terrorists head looked like a pepper pot what a lovely end to a jihadi

Click to rate

692

14

null, 10 months ago

And are spineless liberals want to talk to them and give them a cuddle when they return from Syria, MUGS ,!they are beyond help , no passport no return

Click to rate

1095

22

anna, london, 10 months ago

Good riddance

Click to rate

763

9

Hawkdriver1961, Enterprise, 10 months ago

So how's that multiculturalism working out? At least Europe is waking up to it. America is so cow towed by the left to include their leader, Obama, we are allowing him to continue to break federal law and open the flood gates even more.

Click to rate

695

67 jmoon810, Fort Worth, United States, 10 months ago

Don't let them back in the country- ever!

Click to rate

911

16

Mr_Blonde, Manchester, United Kingdom, 10 months ago

You'd have a job letting them back in considering they are now dead.

Click to rate

237

83

View all

The views expressed in the contents above are those of our users and do not necessarily reflect the views of MailOnline.

We are no longer accepting comments on this article.

Who is this week's top commenter?Find out now

MORE TOP STORIES

Back to topHome | U.K. | News | Sports | U.S. Showbiz | Australia | Femail | Health | Science | Money | Video | Travel | Columnists
Sitemap | Archive | Video Archive | Topics Index | Mobile Apps | Screensaver | RSS | Text-based site | Reader Prints | Our Papers | Top of page
Daily Mail | Mail on Sunday | This is Network | This is Money
Metro | Jobsite | Mail Travel | Zoopla.co.uk | Prime Location

 Published by Associated Newspapers Ltd
 Part of the Daily Mail, The Mail on Sunday & Metro Media Group

 © Associated Newspapers Ltd
Contact us | How to complain | Advertise with us | Syndication | Work with Us | Terms | Privacy policy & cookies |